

Newsletter #7 June 2024

It's the people of the EOSC SOA community that make it a thriving, exciting environment of exchange and progress towards our shared goals. This edition of the EOSC SOA Newsletter highlights just that.

New Secretariat Team

Since November of 2023, there have been several changes to the make up of the Secretariat team. Read more about our team members below.

Meghan Bohardt

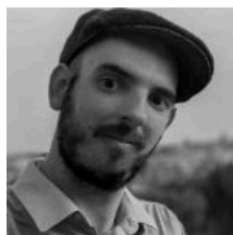

Marie Czuray

Katharina Flicker

Stefan Reichmann

Bernd Saurugger

Birgit Söser

Meghan Bohardt's (since Nov 2023) background in Cultural Anthropology, union organizing and recent training in Library and Information Studies informs her current work at the EOSC SOA. She is most interested in issues of (in)accessibility, ownership of data and knowledge production, and cultural preservation through digitization and long-term data retention.

Marie Czuray (since Dec 2023) comes from the area of Corporate Governance and Business Ethics and has been working on several Open Science projects.

Katharina Flicker (since the beginning) coordinates the EOSC SOA, and starting this year, leads the Secretariat Stakeholder Engagement. Her research focuses on perceptions of trust in (research) infrastructures and indicators for data quality.

Stefan Reichmann (since May 2024) holds a PhD in Sociology and degrees in Sociology and Philosophy. Stefan has worked on the Open Science transition and its impact on disciplinary data practices in his doctoral studies, a background that informs his current work within the EOSC ecosystem, where Stefan facilitates cooperation/coordination of INFRAEOSC projects as part of the EOSC Focus project.

Bernd Saurugger (since the beginning) is a data scientist and has been working at several Open Science projects.

Birgit Söser (since May 2024) has a background in social sciences and computational social systems. Her main interest lies on community building and Open Science.

We're happy to have you in the community,
Ludwig Boltzmann Gesellschaft!

The latest from the Researcher Engagement Working Group

Join us for an insightful interview with Susanne Reichl, a researcher at the intersection of social media, literature and social change. In this conversation, Susanne Reichl delves into the different types of data she is working with. She shares the challenges she faces with data management and the ongoing quest for ensuring data quality. Most compellingly, she addresses the critical issue of trust in data quality. Don't miss this opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of the complexities of digital research.

Updates to the EOSC SOA Website

Bernd Saurugger and Marie Czuray have revamped the Events & Calls page of the EOSC SOA website. The options of either List or Calendar View make it a more intuitive and attractive tool for getting an overview of what is going on in the Austrian and EU Open Science landscapes.

We now need your support: Reach out to us to promote events and calls from within the Austrian community. Write with suggestions to:

Event Recap:

Digital Curators in Museums and Collections

Get ready to unlock the secrets behind skills, requirements, and training for museum data curators! On April 17th, the Natural History Museum Vienna (NHMW) hosted a groundbreaking workshop on data curation essentials, which was co-organised by Heimo Rainer (NHMW) and Nikos Gänsdorfer, working for the Skills4EOSC project, and Sabine Fauland, coordinator of the Austrian Association of Museums (Museumsbund). Representatives from museums and collections from across Austria came together to discuss open science, FAIR principles, and data management practices.

Curious about the game-changing insights and innovative ideas discussed? Keep reading to uncover the keys to professional museum data curation!
